We understand that success is personal.

Everyone has their own definition of what success means to them and every parent wants their child to succeed in life. It is useful and important to have regular conversations with our children to understand how they define success for themselves.

Here are some ways in which you can start that conversation with your child.

01

Find the right time.

Try to have the conversation over food or when everyone is feeling relaxed.

02

Prime the conversation.

Help them think about what brings them joy and a sense of purpose. Give your child space to speak.

03

Make it safe to share openly.

Let them know that it is a safe space to share. Listen attentively without judging.

04

Respect their responses.

What success looks like to them might be very different from yours. Let them share their perspectives and respectfully acknowledge their definition of success.

05

Keep conversations going.

This will be an ongoing conversation with evolving definitions and new insights. Continue exploring what 'success' means together!
